Experience:

Mr. Narvaez is a principal architectural conservator and senior associate with John Milner Associates, Inc., a historic preservation firm. As a conservator, his responsibilities involve survey and analysis of existing building conditions, materials and components, preparation of construction documents and development of conservation treatments. He is experienced in project design, development, and execution for all phases of architectural preservation. Mr. Narvaez has extensive experience in working with museums and institutional and government historic property owners in addressing long-term preservation needs of historic structures and monuments.

Mr. Narvaez is responsible for managing the firm's specialized services for all types of structures including museums, federal buildings, and other historic sites. These services, which comprise a unique blend of traditional architectural services and specialty expertise in historic materials, include preservation management plans, materials conservation, prioritized building conservation programs, building condition assessments, analysis of materials deterioration and failures, preservation maintenance programs and training, non-destructive evaluation, technical construction support services, and materials testing including paint and mortar analysis, masonry testing, treatment evaluation, as well as supervision of outside testing protocols.

Teaching:

Mr. Narvaez teaches three seminars for the National Preservation Institute, Historic Structure Reports: A Management Tool for Historic Properties, Preservation Maintenance: Understanding and Preserving Historic Buildings, and Historic Property Management at locations throughout the United States. He has taught customized versions of these seminars for clients as diverse as the Smithsonian Institute, the Puerto Rico SHPO's office, and the National Guard Bureau.
